

West India Docks

Chaos on the River

11.50

Campari, Orgeat, Lemon

The British Empire was expanding and steam power had arrived. All this meant more trade and pandemonium on the river. Collisions were frequent and plundering was rife. The Port of London was in chaos and there was a desperate need for more docks with wider and deeper shores. First to be built were the East and West India Docks, which helped relieve for a while the pressure on cargo berths for London.

The British Moai

12.00

Bacardi Carta Blanca, HM Falernum, Amaro d'Angostura, Guanabana, Lime, Coconut

At the beginning of 1868, during the golden age of the British Empire, Commodore Richard Powell who was captain of HMS Topaze removed the Hoa Hakananai statue from a clifftop on Easter Island. He donated the seven foot basalt figure to Queen Victoria when the ship returned to the London Docks the following year. Nowadays we can admire the majestic Moai at the main entrance of the British Museum.

The Old Sailor

11.50

Woodford Reserve Straight Bourbon, Galliano, Fernet Branca, Moscovado

The stories of an Old Sailor called Jack Mason is part of the Theodore Thinker series, in which Theodore recalls various tales told to him of adventures on the Oceans and London Docks by Jack. This was originally a children's book printed back in 1855.

The East India Co.

11.50

Umeshu Plum Wine, Martini Ambrato, Port 10 y.o. Orange Flower Water, Peychaud

The Honourable East India Company was the greatest of all merchant trading companies. For over 200 years, it monopolized trade between England and the Far East and rose to account for half of the world's trade. To protect its interests, it even developed its own army and the company ending up taking control over large parts of the Indian subcontinent, colonised parts of Southeast Asia and Hong Kong after a war with Qing China.

The Old Venus

12.00

1800 Silver Tequila, Vanilla & Passion Curd, Lime, Prosecco & Passion Foam

The growth in London's maritime trade during the 18th century brought more and more ships to the wharves and quays. With the ships came sailors and inevitably there was an increase of the number of brothels to meet the growing demand. Those brothels were usually run by women who were able to improve their status as self-made business ladies.

East India Docks

The Dark Whale 12.00

Kraken Spice Rum, Amaro d'Angostura, Lime, Mandarin, Mint, Ginger Beer

From 1775 London's second whaling trade developed. Ships fished the South Atlantic and Pacific for sperm whales, Southern right whales and seals. At the peak of activity in 1821, London was the largest whaling port in the world.

The Gibsonist 13.00

Reyka Vodka or Copperhead Black Batch Gin, Mancino Bianco, Caramelized Balsamic Silver Onion

By the mid-19th century, much of the trade of the Port of London was seasonal and there was very little advance notice that a ship was arriving. This meant that demand for men varied from day to day, even from hour to hour. The dock companies only took on labourers when trade picked up and they needed them. Most of the workers employed were from Eastern Europe and they brought to London their culture of drinking white spirits served with pickled vegetables, a heritage we can still find nowadays.

The Dove 12.50

Maestro Dobel Humido Tequila, St. Germain liqueur, Grapefruit Shrub, Lime, Peychaud, Soda

During the 17th century the British Imperial Fleet was establishing herself as the main fleet in the world. A daily demand of new ships was supplied in the London Docks, where hundreds of workers were employed to build it. As part of the ceremonial launch of a ship, a white Dove was freed as a sign of good luck.

The Lost World 12.50

Sipsmith VJOP Gin, Yellow Chartreuse, Raspberry & Mint Shrub, Lime, Creole Bitter infused Bergamotto

The great expansion of the industrial activity of the country during the latter half of the nineteenth century, brought an enormous increase of trade into the Port of London. London played an important part in the commercial development of Empire countries, especially when referred to India, Australia and New Zealand.
